How and Why to Use RPIN's Family Communication Cards

Whether it's a severe storm, an earthquake, or a public-safety emergency, hazards often happen when family members are apart. You'll feel more secure if you know everyone is okay, and each family member knows how, where and when you'll be reunited. When a major hazard hits, mobile and landline phone service in the area most affected can be overwhelmed. Luckily, out-of-area calls often can get through. That's why emergency experts recommend families create a simple, portable communications plan with local and out-of-area contacts. Create and discuss your plan together. Then fill out a card for each family member. Carry in your wallet or backpack so it's with you wherever you go.

Directions:

When printing, make sure your "page scaling" option is set to "None," so your cards will print at full size.
